

Practice: Order of operations in the OS

Close X

Practice: Order of operations in the OS

Categorization exercise

You've categorized everything.

Step 1

The user powers on the computer.

Step 2

BIOS or UEFI loads the bootloader.

Step 3

The bootloader program loads the OS.

Next: Saving a file

Practice: Order of operations in the OS

Close X

Practice: Order of operations in the OS

Categorization exercise

You've categorized everything.

Step 1

User opens a word processing application and types a document.

Step 2

When the user saves the document, the application communicates with the OS.

Step 3

Practice: Order of operations in the OS

Close X

Practice: Order of operations in the OS

Categorization exercise

You've categorized everything.

Step 3

OS saves the file to a hardware component called the hard drive.

Step 4

Hard drive confirms file was saved, communicates this to OS. OS indicates this within the application.

